The meeting followed the Agenda set forth by Ron:

Class Book Status Report

11 Oct 21

- Content updates

 - Four follow-up interviews to clarify/expand existing material
 - To date, twenty-four classmates have been interviewed

- Outstanding issues
 - Some squadrons still unrepresented (CS-03, 06, 12, and 38), but not a showstopper. Will continue to seek inputs as we go along
 - Ron working to get interviews with African-American classmates
 - Important to get variety of viewpoints, help complete the class portrait
 - Potential candidates: O Mitchell (CS-22), T Thompson (CS-29), Spence Way (CS-21), Ernie Butler (CS-10), Butch Hodges (CS-15), Donnie Richardson (CS-34)
 - Additional suggestions?
- Process updates
 - First round of interviews basically completed
 - Have sufficient material for first draft
 - Additional interviews will help fill in some blanks
 - Target for initial draft now 30 Nov (was 31 Oct as of last report)
 - Review process
 - Additional Blue Team Review on 13 Sep (Scott, Munson)
 - Reviewed current manuscript, looked at basic outline, flow. Looked for gaps, provided “reality check”
 - No issues identified
 - Pink Team Review: mid-Dec 21
 - Will look for coherent and cohesive narrative, completeness, compelling story
 - Will focus on flow and quality of narrative
 - “Cold eyes” review: will consider not only what’s there, but what’s not
 - Need to line up team members: availability during holidays will be key
 - Draft Revision: Jan – Mar 22
 - Will consider Pink Team comments, make necessary corrections
 - Continue additional interviews, as necessary
 - Red Team Review: Apr 22
 - Cohesion, interest, relevance to audience
 - Big picture, but will get more into the details
 - Team members: Arnett (lead), Smith, Diffley, Stefonik
 - Final clearance from people who submitted inputs: Apr – Jul 22
 - Will be most time-consuming
 - Will be getting clearance as we go
 - Gold Team Review: Jul 22
 - Final review/comment
 - Will stay big picture
 - Will need team members
 - Final revisions: July – Oct 22
 - Submit to publisher: Nov 22

- Areas of concern
 - Difficulty in scheduling interviews has and will slow the process down, so timeline has to be flexible
 - New chapters are value-added, but also time-consuming to write
 - Earlier chapters were completed and submitted by classmates, so the primary focus was on editing
 - New chapters are based on interviews and have to be written based on those conversations
- Bottom line
 - We're behind the timeline a bit, but at this point not a showstopper
 - New chapters will really expand the post-AF retirement story, provide valuable perspectives
 - Overall, manuscript is filling out satisfactorily

Gentlemen:

Apologies for missing the meeting. Here's a summary of my update.

- As you know Forged in Blue went very well. A couple of follow-ons:
 - Hennessey has expressed an interest in sponsoring this event in the future, and wants the AOG to chat with them
 - We will meet with the AOG to encourage the organization to use this last Forged in Blue as a tradition standard
 - We will continue to encourage classmates to donate their rings at some point, like in their wills
- Class Gift is moving forward, slowly
 - Class Gift is to encourage classmates to have a current will....and consider establishing a legacy gift toward a class/Academy program
 - Since our last meeting, one more classmate has established a legacy gift in their estate, another has started their first will (44 year marriage, two kids, one with special needs)s
 - Class lunch in Boston was small (~11 classmates within one hour drive), four+spouses attended, four more wanted to come but had commitments. I gave a 20' update on 50th reunion, Class officer news and events, and Class Gift pitch, All wanted a repeat lunch...
 - Based on this first lunch...Pam and I may go out on the road in January for a road trip from ABQ to ATL....and do class lunches on the way. Anyone interested?
 - Otherwise, the Class Gift campaign will be more electronic communications, with the pitch rate picking up as we get within a year of the reunion.

Cheers, Bob
